The Hermitage: Tours begin at the Visitors Center with a 15-minute film about the life of Andrew Jackson and the museum. Then, on to the mansion which was completely restored to its appearance during Jackson's retirement years, 1837-1845. The Hermitage is one of the most originally furnished of the early presidential homes. Six rooms of the house retain the original 1836 wallpaper. In addition to original colors and exactly reproduced textiles, almost all of the furnishings, including furniture, silver, porcelains and portraits, belonged to Jackson. Many of his personal possessions are also here including a sword, hundreds of books, eyeglasses and Bible.
